SUB-THEME 2: What is "quality" in graduate education?

1045– 1145 PANEL DISCUSSION: Deconstructing "quality" and defining indicators
Few would argue that quality of graduate education isn't important but how do we monitor and improve it? Panel members will examine what constitutes the key components and indicators of quality as we delve into a discussion on promoting excellence in Masters and Doctoral programs of nursing.

1145- 1215 Q&A with panel speakers

SUB-THEME 3: Exploring quality indicators at Canadian schools of nursing

1215 – 1230

Defining competencies for graduate education: the case of Quebec

What competencies are we targeting with our graduate nursing programs, and how should we measure them? Dr. Semenic will present Quebec's proposal for targeted competencies for graduate education, and describe how these have informed the development of McGill University's Knowledge Translation (KT) stream for their applied master's program in nursing.

1230– 1330

Lunch

1330 - 1430

Small group discussion on program quality indicators for graduate education.

What makes a quality Masters and Doctoral nursing program? Participants will have opportunity to share experiences on evaluating programs and provide input: What are the key areas for program quality? What indicators are being/should be used? What works? What doesn't work? Lessons learned?

1430 – 1500

Theme: Educating Canadian RNs for the Future

0830 – 0845

Welcome and Opening Remarks

SUB-THEME 1: Evolving scope of RN practice

0845 – 0930

PANEL: Evolving role of the RN – Exploration of the expanding scope, expectations and specializations of RN roles
How do we prepare students today for the health care system of tomorrow? The role of registered nurses (RNs) continues to change and grow in Canada with promising potential for improved patient outcomes, greater accessibility of primary health care, and a health-care system that is more responsive, effective and cost-efficient.

0930 – 1000 Group discussion: How have the different schools responded to the realities and changes in respective provinces?

1000 – 1015 Refreshment Break

SUB-THEME 2: Responding to the Truth and Reconciliation Commission Report

1015 – 1045 Addressing the 2015 Truth and Reconciliation Commission's call to action
Hear from Executive Director, Marilee Nowgesic on the Canadian Indigenous Nurses Association's (CINA) recent work to advance indigenous health and from Isabelle Wallace who will share her own experiences growing up Indigenous, her personal and professional journey into nursing and the implications for nursing education.
